ASBITABULAS VS. OCCIDENCALS.

The second match game between the Occidentals of Jefferson, and the Ashtabulas, took place at Jefferson hast week Saturday, and resulted in the second detect of the Jeffs. The game was witnessed by 150 spectrators and was watched with the greatest in threest. Up to the last half of the sexth laming both cube played a stiff game, the score standing four to four. The Occidentals then seemed to weaken, and the Ashtabulas piled up six runs nears. The Fire and Water Committee was directed to report at next meeting the

The game closed after the first half of the and in malog, leaving fourteen runs for the Ashtabulas and six for the Jeffs.

The Occidentals, aside from the pitching and catching of the McKnight irrothers, played a very loose game. Even Woodburry, the old reliable, disappointed his admirers by his frequent errors.

Streeter of the Ashtabulas, in the sixth iming made a Herenbean but which sent the latt for beyond the left fielder, and upon which he made a home run and brought.

Field and Tolinferro. In the eighth, Watson made a run that was received with pplace, and he was also credited for a illical foul that he picked up in the right field. The pitching of Frank Sillican was never better, and Tolioferro on est played with only a single error,

The result of this game seemed not or y to disgust the members of the Occidentals but the citizens of Jefferson in general, and we are informed that the McKinght rothers have withdrawn from the club. We were unable to procure a full and

The entire took him over the ground and at last accused him of having done the deed, all of which he most vehemently denied, until at last he was surrounded with such a net work of circumstantial evidence and lies.

The fire was succept a work of circumstantial evidence and lies, that he owned up to having done the work. As an excuse, the boy, about 15 years old, but to all appearances an intelligent lad, said that he had seen boys at Ashrabula place nails and other pieces of iron on the rails to have them flattened, and that he was anxious to see if the entry of the fire is, without doubt, the work of an incendiary; Mr. Chamberlin and that he was anxious to see if the entry of the fire is, without doubt, the work of an incendiary; Mr. Chamberlin and family detected the smell of coal oil before retiring, and part of the matting in his lower hallway is saturated with cit, and shows to have run in the hall from the ligent lad, said that he had seen loys at Ashrabula place nails and other pieces of iron on the rails to have them flattened, and that he was anxious to see if the engine could flatten a rail. The sheriff took his prisoner with him to Jefferson the same night, and the case will probably be tried the present term of court. Mr. Siths is cutified to great credit for the manner in which he did this job. Although many are of the opinion that the boy could not have placed the rails upon the track without some one helping him, it is the opinion of the officers who have carefully investigated the matter, that he had no help and that as he says with the aid of a stick, which he used as a lever, he did the work himself and alone.—Reporter.

He wished to identify himself with it more price. Another gentleman on the same day in making payment, said he could not do without the TELEGRAPH, and yet before the change to quarto form, he felt that there was not reading matter enough to supply his want. Now he was suited in supply his want. Now he was suited in use is indicated in dyspepsia and all forms quantity, and having been always satisfied of nervous prostration. with the quality of the paper, he was suited exactly. The increase of matter, we find reaches a very general want. A gentleman of decided Democratic proclivities for a long time an intelligent and thoughtful reader of the TELEGRAPH, but not agreeing with it in sentiment, expressed his satisfaction with it for its positive out-spoken character. He could not tolerate dish-water in politics. If he read a Republican paper he wanted one that gave no uncertain sound. The TELEGRAPH came up to his idea of a home paper.

You see it took Geneva enterprise to starr a Teel Company in Ashtabula, and it is going to require Geneva skill to operate it when ready for business. Hence several Geneva mechanics and business men will remove to Ashtabula, and some have removed. In fact, it is believed that Geneva men could have saved that Rolling Mill! We expect to do great things for Ashtabula in the future, and knowing Bro. Reed's magnanimity feel certain he will credit us accordingly.

The Standard and Telegraph are still credit us accordingly.

The Standard and Telegroph are still engaged in a kind of spritheal warfare. We have not kept the run of the skirmish very closely, but evidently each suspects the other of having a bottle hid away somewhere, or did, at the commencement of hostilities. Latterly it looks as though the Standard man had fluished his bottle, and has a longing eye on Bro. Read's barn where the supply has been husbanded with more care. Boys, you had better take a Murphy, both of you, and soher up for the opening campaign.

Aproposition has recently been made to the Genera Sewing Machine Co., by a company can gaged in the manufacture of sewing machine cases, to erect for their use a building, 50x190 feet, of which they will take a lease for three years, including running power. The proposition of this company for said lease and power will pay the Geneva Co. 25 per cent. on the investment. This company have already the contract for furnishing cases for the Wilson, Wanzer and White machines, three of the leading machines of the day, and will make for the Geneva Co. entertain the proposition favorably, and will very likely furnish the desired building and needed power.
